

MES DEMOISELLES

For those who favour a bohemian beach aesthetic rendered in softest, lightest cotton, look no further than Mes Demoiselles. From her Parisian atelier, Anita Radovanovic designs an airy collection of gypsy dresses and floaty peasant blouses. There are ivory flutter-sleeve tunic tops, blue-stripe cotton trousers, dotty maxi dresses, broderie anglaise full skirts and ivory voile tops. With a love-worn quality already woven into the seams, these are the kind of pieces that will come out summer after summer. Mesdemoisellesparis.com

HEROES

Make space for these key labels and pieces, perfect for hotter climes. By Ellen Burney

KIINI

New York swimwear label Kiini has downtown girls enthralled by its handmade crocheted bikinis woven with high-tech fabrics, neon cord, coloured elastics and cotton yarn. "I created the first one for myself and it got so much attention... Before I knew it, the line was born," says its Turkish designer Ipek Irgit, a former stylist and Max Mara fashion consultant. TABULA RASA

British-born, New York-based Emily Diamandis, who spent five years helming knitwear at Rag & Bone, has launched her own luxury-knit line, Tabula Rasa. The label offers sweaters in fisherman's rib, kaftans in hand-crocheted linen and beach cardigans, wraps and robes in cashmere. The spirited colours and geometric patterns grew from Diamandis's travels in Asia and Central America. "I was also influenced by Slim Aarons's photography book A Wonderful Time: An Intimate Portrait of the Good Life." Tabularasa-ny.com

ZEUS & DIONE

Mareva Grabowski and Dimitra Kolotoura "looked to the geometric architecture of Greek temples" to create their linear silhouettes. Their Athens-based label, Zeus & Dione, boasts crochet dresses handmade in the Cyclades, silk blouses woven in northern Greece, and dresses embroidered in Crete with fastenings made by Athenian silversmiths.
